Table D

“Episcopal Property,” “the property,” or “the disputed property” refers to (1) the real and personal property listed in the table below, and (2) any and all real or personal property, of any character or kind, type or description, including all bank accounts and financial assets, that were held by or for the benefit of The Episcopal Church, the Diocese, the Diocesan Corporation, the Fund for the Endowment of the Episcopate, any of the parishes or missions of the Diocese (including but not limited to the congregations listed in Table F), or any other constituent entity of the Diocese, as of November 15, 2008, as well as any property acquired using, or as a result of, other Episcopal Property in any way, including but not limited to income generated by selling, investing, or encumbering with debt, leases, or liens any Episcopal Property, and property purchased with Episcopal Property or with funds derived from Episcopal Property. Episcopal Property also includes any and all property that originated as Episcopal Property, including any and all Episcopal Property that Defendants have re-characterized, transferred to different accounts, placed under different names, transferred to new entities, or commingled with other property. This table is not intended to be an exhaustive list of Episcopal Property; Plaintiffs are unaware of the full extent of Episcopal Property because Defendants have controlled the records since at least 2008. Relief granted by this Court in this case applies to all Episcopal Property.

Table G

This table contains a representative, non-exhaustive selection of excerpts from previous filings that support Plaintiffs' arguments, made for preservation purposes, under Watson deference, Jones retroactivity, and the enforceability of denominational trust clauses under Jones, irrespective of state law. See Section V.2.6.

(1) This case should be decided in Plaintiffs' favor under the deference approach, because the hierarchical Episcopal Church indisputably recognizes Plaintiffs as the only parties authorized to use the identity and property of the subordinate local Church entities.¹

Under Deference, every court in the nation to consider the issue, without exception, has determined that The Episcopal Church is hierarchical.² It is indisputable that The Church has identified Plaintiffs, the loyal Episcopal Parties, as its continuing Episcopal Diocese of Fort Worth, with a right to its identity and property. 22CR4475-77, 4495-97, 4504-05 [A5-7, 23-25, 30-31]; 23CR4846, 4848-49 [A363, 365-66]; 24CR5120-21 [A613-14]; 25CR5380-81, 5383-85, 5390 [A866-67, 869-71, 876]. Under Deference, this resolves the dispute simply, fairly, and constitutionally.

Defendants raise the untenable, last-resort position that, even if The Church is hierarchical, the hierarchy conveniently stops at the Diocese. In addition to the Statement of Facts above (showing the obvious three-tier, top-down hierarchy), Defendant Iker himself told the Fourth Circuit that The Church “has a national body that leads the overall church through its General Conventions Below that are the various dioceses [whose] canons [] cannot be inconsistent with national canons”; an “Episcopal bishop . . . is governed by the constitution and canons of the Church” and “must adhere to [Church laws] or be subject to discipline.”³ Courts around the nation routinely affirm the top-down three-tier hierarchy of the Church.⁴ Under Deference, that ends the debate.⁵

(2) The First Amendment and Jones v. Wolf require courts to enforce express trusts recited in general-church governing documents irrespective of state law, and here the Dennis Canon resolves the case in Plaintiffs’ favor on those grounds.⁶

Pursuant to Jones, the Episcopal parties set forth national and local provisions to ensure that loyal Episcopalians would retain Church property.⁷ Jones instructed that, with minimal burden, “the constitution of the general church can be made to recite an express trust in favor of the denominational church.”⁸ In direct response, the Church enacted Canon I.7.4 (“the Dennis Canon”) that same year, three years before The

Unlike here, in the vast majority of cases, the Church’s diocesan bishops and officers take their “solemn” oaths of loyalty and fiduciary responsibility seriously, and the national Church need not participate directly to protect its interest. 24CR5134-35, 5227 [A627-28, 722].

Episcopal Diocese of Fort Worth was formed: “All real and personal property held by or for the benefit of any Parish, Mission or Congregation is held in trust for this Church and the Diocese thereof in which such Parish, Mission or Congregation is located.” 24CR5167 [JA00485] (emphasis added).

Such post-Jones steps merely reiterated property-related and hierarchy-related canons dating back centuries. . . . Further, all Church agents handling such property are bound by their unambiguous submission to Church law and discipline.⁹ As a result, no individual at any level of the Church may hold or use property except in accordance with the Church’s own Constitution and Canons.

Courts around the nation have repeatedly held that The Episcopal Church’s Dennis Canon and other governing national documents are dispositive under Jones. Indeed, echoing the present dispute, the Georgia Supreme Court, whose Neutral Principles approach gave rise to Jones, recently held:

[T]he parent church has always had control over local church property, with that control becoming more and more explicit in the “legally cognizable form” of the Episcopal Church’s governing canons, culminating in an express property trust provision (the “Dennis Canon”) in 1979, just after the Jones v. Wolf decision invited hierarchical churches to clarify property control with such a provision.¹⁰

These governing national provisions end the Neutral Principles analysis.¹¹

(3) The application of the neutral-principles approach in this case infringes free-exercise rights because it is unconstitutionally retroactive under Jones v. Wolf, and this case must therefore be resolved in Plaintiffs' favor under the deference doctrine.¹²

Jones raises the possibility of unconstitutional application of neutral principles to churches that have arranged their affairs under deference. The Jones Court determined that retroactivity was not an issue in that case, because the Georgia Supreme Court had “clearly enunciated its intent to follow the neutral-principles analysis” nine years earlier and in two prior cases.¹³

The Jones Court reasoned that adoption of neutral principles would not “frustrate [] free-exercise rights” because “[a]t any time before the dispute erupts, the parties can ensure, if they so desire, that the faction loyal to the hierarchical church will retain the church property.”¹⁴ “The burden involved in taking such steps will be minimal.”¹⁵

Noting the retroactivity concern, this Court found that its application of neutral principles in this case was not retroactive, because “over a century ago in Brown v. Clark, 102 Tex. 323, 116 S.W. 360 (1909), our analysis and holding substantively reflected the neutral principles methodology.”¹⁶

But “substantively reflected” is not “clearly enunciated.” For more than 100 years – before, during, and even after this case – courts, litigants, and churches across Texas have consistently understood Brown to be a deference case. This includes Texas courts of appeal, the Fifth Circuit applying Texas law, both sides in this litigation, and congregations now acting to leave their denominations in the wake of this Opinion. An objective review of the case law shows that Brown did not clearly enunciate the adoption of neutral principles over deference. In fact, even the most recent case law across Texas leading up to this dispute reinforced churches' justifiable reliance on the deference methodology.

Because Brown did not clearly enunciate Texas's adoption of the neutral principles methodology over deference, churches in Texas did not have the opportunity required under the Constitution to reorganize their internal affairs under the new rules of the road "before the dispute erupts" ¹⁷ The burden this has placed on several denominations in Texas is not minimal but maximal – switching doctrines in the middle of a dispute has led to protracted, expensive litigation and has unsettled decades-old commitments that were sacrosanct when made under deference. To avoid an unconstitutional, retroactive harm that infringes Appellees' free exercise and due process rights, this Court should affirm the summary judgment below under deference, while adopting the neutral principles methodology going forward for disputes that have not yet erupted.

(4) The neutral-principles approach endorsed in Jones v. Wolf does not remain a constitutionally viable means of resolving church-property disputes, especially in light of Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church & School v. EEOC, 132 S. Ct. 694 (2012) and this case must therefore be resolved in Plaintiffs' favor under the deference doctrine. ¹⁸

The Jones majority endorsed neutral principles on the basis of optimistic assumptions that the approach would be "objective," "secular," and "flexible." 443 U.S. at 603. Respectfully, those assumptions were wrong. The neutral-principles approach has proven confusing and difficult to apply. And that confusion has produced deeply divergent outcomes, with some courts awarding church property to breakaway factions and others to the loyal church on the same facts. Even more disturbing, the neutral-principles approach has inspired courts to intrude into matters of church governance and effectively overrule religious organizations on an issue that cuts right to the heart of free religious exercise: Who is the true church? That outcome, an inevitable consequence of Jones, cannot be countenanced. The Court should grant certiorari, hold that Jones is no longer good law, and reaffirm the deference approach from which Jones deviated.

1. The Jones dissent warned that neutral principles would prove “difficult” to apply. Id. at 610, 616 (Powell, J., dissenting). That turned out to be an understatement. Outcomes in neutral-principles courts have been irreconcilable and impossible to predict, even in cases involving the very same religious organization and texts. See, e.g., Cameron W. Ellis, Church Factionalism and Judicial Resolution: A Reconsideration of the Neutral-Principles Approach, 60 Ala. L. Rev. 1001, 1007 (2009) (citing neutral-principles cases with disparate results). As scholars put it, neutral principles has produced “massive inconsistency,” Hassler, 35 Pepp. L. Rev. at 431, and “a welter of contradictory and confusing case law largely devoid of certainty,” Hon. John E. Fennelly, Property Disputes and Religious Schisms: Who Is the Church?, 9 St. Thomas L. Rev. 319, 353 (1997). Such gross disparity has resulted not from differences in state law, but from differences in states' interpretation of Jones and the First Amendment.

The inconsistent judicial treatment of The Episcopal Church's Dennis Canon is a particularly striking example, see supra 21-22, but there are myriad others. To take just two: Some courts have interpreted the Presbyterian Church's Book of Order as establishing a trust in favor of the national church, see, e.g., Hope Presbyterian Church, 291 P.3d at 727, while others have deemed its trust provision ineffective, see, e.g., Heartland Presbytery, 364 S.W.3d at 592. And some courts have held that breakaways' efforts to amend a local church's corporate bylaws to sever ties with the denominational church are ineffective, see, e.g., New v. Kroeger, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464, 480 (Cal. Ct. App. 2008), while others have held on identical facts that such efforts succeeded, see, e.g., All Saints Parish Waccamaw, 685 S.E.2d at 174-175.

Needless to say, such disparate results make it difficult for religious organizations to structure their affairs, particularly across multiple states. And where the exercise of religion is concerned, that difficulty cannot be dismissed as a mere casualty of federalism. To put it plainly: Religious organizations and their members cannot freely exercise their religion without control over the place where that exercise occurs. Even the Jones majority recognized as much. See 443 U.S. at 606 (rejecting free-exercise concerns on ground that religious organizations could still control their property). And religious organizations cannot control their houses of worship - and thus cannot protect their free-exercise rights - if courts cannot resolve church-property disputes with some measure of predictability. “Predictability in the resolution of intrachurch disputes is essential to the First Amendment's guarantee of Free Exercise, because only with predictability will churches be truly free to exercise their ecclesiastical choices regarding polity and organization.” Belzer, 11 St. Thomas L. Rev. at 135 (emphasis in original). Yet church-property disputes could hardly be less predictable than neutral principles has rendered them.

The tremendous free-exercise burden imposed by divergent interpretations of Jones should not be countenanced. This Court has not hesitated to overrule opinions that “produced confusion.” United States v. Dixon, 509 U.S. 688, 711 (1993). That such confusion impedes the free exercise of religion is all the more reason to do so here.

2. While insoluble confusion is reason enough to reconsider Jones, it is not that decision's most pernicious progeny. Even worse: The neutral-principles approach has “entangle[d] the civil courts in matters of religious controversy,” with courts regularly going so far as to overrule churches on who constitutes the true church - the very outcome Jones sought to avoid. 443 U.S. at 608.

a. Entanglement in religion has been a regular byproduct of the neutral-principles approach. In the name of neutral principles, courts have given their own interpretations to deeply religious texts. See, e.g., Fonken v. Community Church of Kamrar, 339 N.W.2d 810, 818 (Iowa 1983) (interpreting Presbyterian Book of Order). And they have reached their own conclusions about questions of church doctrine. See, e.g., General Convention of New Jerusalem v. MacKenzie, 874 N.E. 2d 1084, 1086-88 (Mass. 2007) (deciding whether a congregation's disaffiliation constituted a church dissolution). The result has been “an end-run around the First Amendment's prohibition against inquiry into and resolution of religious issues,” Pet. App. 52a, precisely the constitutional precipice the Jones dissenters predicted.

And yet that result was unavoidable. After all, Jones itself invited courts to interpret religious documents. The majority cautioned that courts should read such documents in “purely secular terms” and refrain from deciding religious questions. 443 U.S. at 604. But the fact is that many church documents are “drawn in terms of religious precepts. When they are, attempting to read them ‘in purely secular terms’ is more likely to promote confusion than understanding.” Id. at 612 (Powell, J., dissenting). And it is more likely to invite decision of religious questions than discourage it.

b. Neutral-principles courts also have interfered with church polity in an even more fundamental respect: Time and again, they have thwarted churches' doctrinal determinations about who represents the rightful church. See, Trinity Presbyterian Church v. Tankersley, 374 So.2d 861, 865 (Ala. 1979) (ruling for breakaway faction notwithstanding that the denominational church had “officially recognized” the loyal group “as the true congregation”); see also supra 19-21 (collecting cases).

In a leading article, Professor Laycock surveyed the cases and concluded that “neutral principles [has] greatly encouraged  judicial disruption of church governance.” Douglas Laycock, Church Autonomy Revisited, 7 Geo. J.L. & Pub. Pol'y 253, 257-258 (2009). He explained that state courts “have often applied ‘neutral’ principles with a strong congregational bias, allowing local churches to secede (and take the property with them) from churches that were clearly hierarchical or presbyterial.” Id. And such decisions, he found, contradict principles at the heart of the religious orders in question:

Differences in church governance reflect deep theological disagreements; the wars of religion were fought in part over these choices of whether to have a Pope, whether to have bishops, whether to have elected assemblies, or whether to have no authority at all higher than the local congregation. Religious liberty includes the right to choose from among these forms of church organization, but that right is sharply eroded if secular courts are free to act on Congregationalist principles every time a dispute arises between a local congregation and a larger religious organization. [Id.]

Neutral-principles courts have run roughshod over these religious freedoms, allowing breakaway factions who had consented to hierarchical church governance to take property from the Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic Churches, just to name a few. See, e.g., Krauze v. Polish Roman Catholic St. Stanislaus Parish, No. 0822-CC07847 (Mo. Cir. Ct. 22d Jud. Cir. Mar. 15, 2012) (excommunicated faction permitted to abscond with parish property under “neutral principles”).

c. Neutral-principles courts, however, are not necessarily to blame. Their mistakes are manifestations of Jones's fundamental constitutional error. As the Jones dissent recognized, so-called “church property” disputes “arise almost invariably out of disagreements regarding doctrine and practice,” with courts asked to decide, effectively, which faction constitutes the “true” church and may claim its identity and cathedrals. See 443 U.S. at 616 (Powell, J., dissenting). Thus, “[w]hen civil courts step in to resolve intrachurch disputes over church property, they will either support or overturn the authoritative resolution” of that question “within the church itself.” Id. at 614. Watson told courts to support the church's determination. The neutral-principles approach “actually invites civil courts” to reject it. Id.

That is what happened here. Church factions divided by doctrinal disputes each claimed the right to represent the continuing church and possess its property. The property was held expressly in trust for the Church under the Church's governing rules - rules to which all parties agreed - by corporations formed to facilitate the Church's mission and ministry. The question is which group rightfully represents those entities, and the Church has given a definitive answer: Petitioners. Yet under neutral principles, a court can substitute its own judgment. Such profound judicial incursion into church polity is deeply problematic from the perspective of the Free Exercise Clause, the Establishment Clause, and the First Amendment right to associate in a manner that facilitates religious activity. Cf. Roberts v. United States Jaycees, 468 U.S. 609, 618 (1984).

3. Respect for these constitutional precepts led this Court to hold for a century that deference is the way to resolve property disputes within hierarchical churches. See, e.g., Watson, 80 U.S. at 733-734; Kedroff, 344 U.S. at 116; Milivojevich, 426 U.S. at 704-705. Watson and its progeny recognized that “[a]ll who united themselves to [a hierarchical church] do so with an implied consent to” church governance. Watson, 80 U.S. at 729. “[A]ppeal[s] to the secular courts” to challenge intrachurch agreements, the Court feared, would “lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies.” Id. Unlike Jones, these earlier decisions exude respect for—instead of inviting intrusion into and rejection of—religious choices.

The same respect animates this Court's recent decision in Hosanna-Tabor. Relying on the Watson line—and conspicuously omitting any mention of Jones and neutral principles—Hosanna-Tabor held that courts must defer to “a church's determination of who can act as its ministers.” 132 S. Ct. at 704-705. That holding reflects Watson's teaching that protecting the free exercise of religion and preventing the establishment thereof requires deference to religious organizations. See Douglas Laycock, Hosanna-Tabor and the Ministerial Exception, 35 Harv. J. L. & Pub. Pol'y 839, 853 (2012) (“Hosanna-Tabor is a sweeping and unanimous reaffirmation of the earlier cases, particularly Watson.”). And it is irreconcilable with Jones. In particular, Hosanna-Tabor is flatly inconsistent with Jones's statement that courts could apply “neutral provisions of state law governing the manner in which churches  hire employees.” 443 U.S. at 606. More generally, whereas Jones “explicitly rejected blanket deference to religious institutions,” Hosanna-Tabor held that such deference was necessary in the ministerial context to avoid unconstitutional entanglement with church polity. Caroline Mala Corbin, The Irony of Hosanna-Tabor Evangelical Lutheran Church and School v. EEOC, 106 Nw. U. L. Rev. 951, 957-958 (2012). And if the “Religion Clauses bar the government from interfering with the decision of a religious group to fire one of its ministers,” Hosanna-Tabor, 132 S. Ct. at 702, they likewise bar interference with the equally fundamental decision as to the identity of the rightful church.

Jones was an aberration—a departure from the well-trodden path into “totally uncharted” waters. Jones, 443 U.S. at 616 (Powell, J., dissenting). But 35 years of rough seas have made clear that the Court had it right from the beginning. And the decisions below prove the point:

Respondents swore allegiance to a historic denomination as a condition of association, were entrusted with historic Church property as the Church's custodians, and then asked the secular courts to bless their efforts to break away from the Church and take its property with them. In the name of “neutral principles,” the breakaways “invited intrusion into church polity forbidden by the First Amendment,” id. at 610, asking the state to overturn the Church's judgment about who may preach and pray on its property. And the state accepted the invitation.

Hosanna-Tabor was a course correction that should have marked a return to deference and the end of the neutral-principles experiment. In the wake of Hosanna-Tabor, the Court should grant certiorari and clarify that deference is the only constitutionally permissible approach to church-property disputes. Such a holding would ensure that courts steer clear of the free-exercise and establishment problems inherent in “neutral principles.” And it would give the church keys back to Petitioners and countless others who have been wrongfully shut out of their religious homes.
